Our Core Activities

Networking

At the heart of EEEGR is our passion to build contacts across the energy sector bringing our region's supply chain closer to the major players, for mutual benefit. It's a two-way deal. Our members meet regularly – not just to talk but to do business.

Events

We host two flagship conferences and our prestigious innovation awards each year, as well as a suite of focused sector specific events and corporate social functions.

We also lead visits to energy trade fairs and exhibitions and attend events to promote our members across the UK and around the world.

Special interest groups

At the heart of a world leading energy hub, we focus on the complete portfolio of resources in our region. To drive the agenda for specific sectors, we have established a range of special interest groups – a combination of interactive discussion workshops and direct communication through email and online forums.

Publicity

We have extensive facilities and excellent contacts to promote and showcase our members and their work and to share their success stories with the wider world. We can spread the word in many ways including our own quarterly EEEGR News magazine and website. We love to highlight the many occasions when our members achieve even more by working together.

Opportunities

EEEGR wants all members to be part of the exciting and prosperous future in energy. We will ensure that the small business gets all the help it needs on the ladder to success and that global companies can connect with a supply chain which is skilled, experienced, knowledgeable and conveniently packaged within the eastern region.

Working on your behalf

EEEGR works on your behalf to promote the East of England as a world leading all energy hub, encouraging inward investment from energy majors and attracting international business opportunities.

We represent our members in government on a local and national level. We work to ensure that energy remains high on the political agenda and that the East of England is represented in Westminster and within UK energy policy.

Through our Skills for Energy programme, EEEGR works on a number of projects to ensure a skilled and sustainable local workforce for today and for the future.

Be part of the energy community in the East of England, take advantage of our many membership benefits and support our industry focused initiatives – Join EEEGR.
